

Krulbol

Aim of the game: To roll Krulbols as close as possible to a pin called “peg”.

Set up: Fix the two pegs at the two ends of the field. The game is played at outdoor or indoor courts.

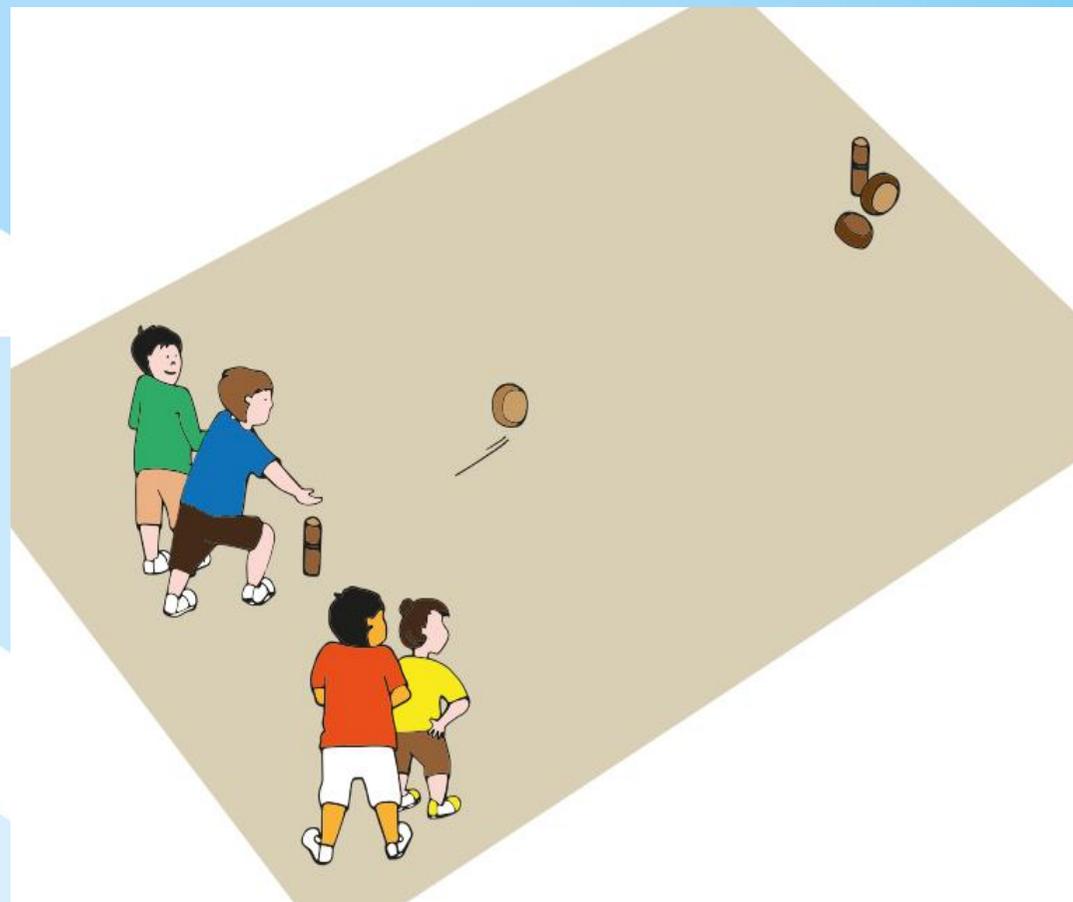

Rules:

It can be a game between individual players or between two teams. All players have two Krulbols per round at their disposal.

There are various strategies to score:

- 1) to roll the Krulbols as close as possible to the peg; in this tactic, pushing back the opponent's bowl is of secondary importance;
- 2) to push the opponent's Krulbol back and away from the peg as a defensive move.

The playing field is used first forward, and then, when the first round is over (when all Krulbols have been thrown), the direction changes to backward without displacing the Krulbols – players therefore move to the other end of the field and throw their new Krulbols to the second peg. One point is given for each Krulbol which is closer to the peg than the closest of the opponent's one. The game continues until one player or team first reaches a score of nine points. It is the winner.
